CATARRH

Of Nose, or Throat, use one spoonful each. Thymozon Glycoline, warm water, mix. Relieves at once. Badger Drug Co.

Ice-land Gloves.

In so cold a climate the glove must be put off or on as rapidly and easily as possible so it is made without fingers, and in order that no time may be wasted in distinguishing between right and left all gloves have two thumbs. You simply thrust your hand into the first glove that comes and your thumb immediately finds its way. There are of course drawbacks in the matter of appearance, for the dangling idle thumb looks untidy.

Bad Luck.

"George, mother writes that she is coming to spend 2 weeks with us."
"How'd that happen, did you break a mirror?"

BELOIT TEAM MET DEFEAT AT EDGERTON

Close Basketball Contest at Edgerton Last Evening Resulted in Beloit Defeat, 23 to 22.
(Special to the Gazette.)
Edgerton, Jan. 28.—In a very close and interesting game the Edgerton high school basketball team defeated the Beloit high school basketball team by the score of 23 to 22, in the high school gymnasium last night. The Edgerton boys started off with a lead of two points which they held the first half, the score at the end of that time being 13 to 11 in favor of the home team.

At the start of the second half two field baskets by Carey put the Beloit boys in the lead for a short time, but Ogden then took two field throws and Edgerton again took the lead, which they maintained to the end.

The game was not as fast as the one last week with Brodhead, as the Beloit boys persisted in holding on and pushing continuously, which not only slowed up the team work, but made necessary the calling of many fouls.

The line-up:

Beloit: Wilford, center; Carey, right forward; Ralston, left forward; Brodhead, right guard; Van Camp, left guard.

Field baskets: Ogden, 5; R. McIntosh, 2; Wilford, 3; Carey, 3; Van Camp, 1. Free throws: Ogden, 7; McIntosh, 2; Ralston, 8. Referee and umpire: Reed and Jensen.

An curtain raiser the Janesville Midkiss trimmed the Edgerton Midkiss by the score of 17 to 14.

To Erect New Building.
The lot at the corner of Henry and Canal streets, purchased by Frank Brown last week, has been sold to P. M. Ellingson, who will erect a building on the same in which to conduct his hardware business. The two frame buildings now on the lot are not included in the sale.

Personal.
Mr. Alvin Lyon, who moved here today from Gray's Lake as Mr. Lyon will start work at the Edgerton Wagon company next week.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Coon, their son, Warren, and Alan Earle have gone to Chicago to attend the auto show.

BROUGHT BROTHER HOME
IN SERIOUS CONDITION

Henry Wesendock Returned From Causton, Wis., With His Brother, George, Who is Very Ill.
(Special to the Gazette.)
Edgerton, Jan. 28.—Henry Wesendock and Wayland Harvey returned yesterday from Causton, Wis., where they were called a few days ago to bring home George Wesendock. They found him in a serious condition and it was necessary to bring him home on a cot. He was today removed to the farm home of his father, four miles north of Edgerton. His ailment is rheumatism and other complications, it being a reaction of an injury he met with some 10 or 12 years ago in the Child warehouse here when he had both limbs broken above the knee.

Men's Club Meeting.
The Men's Club of the Congregation at church met last night at the residence of W. T. Pomeroy. The meeting was addressed by Prof. W. H. Lighty of the University on "The University Extension Work as Developed in Wisconsin Churches."

The subject Sunday morning at the M. E. church will be "The Ideal Life." In the evening "Cross-examination by an Ancient Lawyer." The worth lesson at 6:15.

"Growing Worse" is the theme Sunday morning at the Congregational church. In the evening Mr. Taul, a Chinese student about to graduate from the University of Wisconsin, will address the Men's Club.

Personal.
E. M. Hubbard, leaf tobacco dealer, left today for Los Angeles, Cal., to buy his father a visit.

William Link, of the clear making force with the Edgerton Clear Company, went to Madison today, being called there by the serious illness of his father.

A number of young couples from here attended a dancing party in Stoutland Friday evening.

Yesterday ended the half-year examinations of the Edgerton high school.

MILTON JUNCTION.

Milton Junction, Jan. 28.—Mrs. Gillman Jones is on the sick list this week with a severe attack of grippe attended with a high fever. Mrs. Adeline Marsh is attending her during the daytime and Mrs. McCulloch is with her at night.

Mrs. Lolly, the nurse who has been attending Mrs. D. E. Thorpe, has returned to Janesville. Mrs. Thorpe is gaining slowly.

Mrs. E. M. Butts returned to her home in Bohaven after a week's visit here.

A. M. Thorpe is still confined to his house with grippe.

The Eastern Star Chapter held open installation of officers at their hall last Wednesday night. Each member invited one guest. After the installation a two-course supper was served.

Novels.

Novels are avocets. All people with healthy literary appetites love them—almost all women: a vast number of clear, hard-headed men, judges, bishops, chancellors, mathematicians, are notorious novel readers, as well as young boys and sweet girls, and their kind, tender mothers.—William Makepeace Thackeray.

APPROPRIATIONS TO BE MUCH LARGER

Senator George E. Scott Introduces Measure Increasing Income of Big State School.
Madison, Wis., Jan. 28.—An increase in the income and in the building funds of the University of Wisconsin on the basis of a growth of 23 per cent in the number of students in the last two years and of the constantly growing demand on the part of the citizens of the state for expert assistance from the university, is provided for in a bill introduced by the senate by Senator George E. Scott of Prairie Farm.

The bill provides for the increase in the number of students by increasing the present two-sevenths of a mill tax to three-eighths of a mill. Now the university is receiving the two-sevenths of a mill tax fixed by the legislature in 1907, together with $100,000 a year, appropriated by the legislature in 1909. As the growth of the institution will require at least $150,000 a year additional, Senator Scott's bill proposes to change the rate to three-eighths of a mill, which will provide approximately the present income plus $150,000.

More Money for Permanent Improvements.
The university bill restores the building and permanent improvement fund to $300,000 a year, the amount provided by the legislature in 1907.

The last legislature cut this amount to $200,000 but added $50,000 for books and equipment. The increase desired is therefore $50,000 a year. This fund is to be used for the construction of academic buildings, in the order of their greatest need, for the enlargement and repair of present buildings and for the purchase of books, furniture and equipment.

No plan for any building can be entered into until the plan and contracts with complete estimates of the total cost, has been approved in writing by the governor, who shall withhold such approval until he has satisfied himself that such buildings are required and can be completed for the sum proposed by the regents.

The sum of $50,000 a year is specifically set aside from the proposed annual appropriation of $300,000 for the purchase of books, furniture, apparatus, and equipment.

New Dormitories.
For the construction and outfitting of women's and men's dormitories and a common and union for men, Senator Scott's bill provides for an annual appropriation for four years of $250,000. A woman's dormitory is further provided, shall be the first of these student buildings to be erected.

As in the case of the academic buildings, plans and contracts for the student buildings proposed by the regents must be investigated by the governor and approved by him in writing before the erection of the building can be undertaken.

More Money for Extension Work.
For university extension, the bill provides $100,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1912, and $125,000 for the year ending June 30, 1913. Last year the university received $50,000 for its extension work, and this year $75,000, the amounts appropriated by the last legislature.

For the purpose of conducting traveling schools of agriculture, demonstration, experiments, and investigations for the improvement of agricultural education and the spread of agricultural knowledge throughout the state, the bill appropriated $10,000 a year for the years ending June 30, 1912, and June 30, 1913. This is an increase of $10,000 for this year over the amount set aside for this purpose for last year and this year, by the legislature in 1909.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Mary Doran.
Death called Mrs. Mary Doran to the world beyond this morning at six o'clock at her home, 502 North bluff street. She had been ill for some time past and her demise was due to various complications arising from old age.

Mrs. Doran was born in the County of Galway, Ireland, in 1830. In 1857 she came to this country and settled in Rock county, soon after her arrival in the United States. She was married to the late Miles Doran, who preceded her in death by thirty years. Mrs. Doran was possessed of a kind and cheerful disposition which made her beloved by all who knew her. She had been for many years a faithful and devoted member of St. Mary's church and she will be missed by a large circle of friends in this city.

The deceased is survived by four children, one son and three daughters: Mrs. James Finley of the town of Rock, Misses Anna and Ellen Doran, and John P. Doran, all of this city. Funeral services will be held from St. Mary's church at nine o'clock Monday morning.

Dr. H. C. Neer.
Mrs. Ira P. Wortendyke was notified by telegram yesterday of the death of her father, Dr. H. C. Neer, Park Ridge, N. J.

Herman Loeffler.
Funeral services for the late Herman Loeffler will be held at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow afternoon from the home of his sister, Mrs. Julius Schilling, on Locust street.

Capt. Chas. Leavitt Noggle.
Word has been received here today of the death of Captain Charles Leavitt Noggle which occurred late last evening at his home in Wayne, Mich. The deceased was seventy-one years of age and was the son of the late Judge Noggle. He was born in Janesville and here he received his early education and training. In 1861 he enlisted in the Wisconsin Volunteers and served throughout the Civil war. He received the commission of captain and for a time was a prisoner in the Libby prison. He leaves a number of friends among the older residents of this city, especially among the old soldiers, who will hear of his death with sincere regret. An especially sad feature of his death is the fact that his sister, Mrs. Kate Noggle Brainerd, died last Monday and was buried in Oak Hill cemetery here on Wednesday morning.

The deceased leaves three sisters and one brother: Mrs. P. W. Puffer of Monroe, Wis.; Mrs. Norman A. Brumley of Cambridge, N. Y.; Mrs. John McGluey of Payette, Idaho; and Major D. L. Noggle of San Francisco.

also, Ward D. Williams of this city is a nephew of the deceased and Mrs. R. F. Campbell of Watertown, South Dakota is a niece.

HIGH OFFICIALS TO SPEAK AT BANQUET

President Taft and Other Notables To Give Addresses At McKinley Banquet—Other News Of Week.

(Special to the Gazette.)
Washington, D. C., Jan. 28.—President Taft, Secretary Knox, Justice Day and other prominent public men who were intimately associated with the late President McKinley will be the speakers at the banquet to be given Monday night by the Ohio Society of Washington to commemorate the birthday anniversary of the martyred President.

Schools, colleges, historical societies, typographical unions, editorial associations and various other organizations in many parts of the country will unite Friday in paying honor to the memory of Horace Greeley. The occasion will be the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of the great editor.

The new British parliament will assemble Tuesday for the purpose of swearing in the new members. One week later the session, which is expected to be one of the most momentous of recent years, will be formally opened by the King with a full state ceremony.

A special election will be held Tuesday in the city of St. Louis to decide upon the acceptance or rejection of the new city charter. The most distinguishing feature of the charter is the provision placing the great majority of the city officials and employees under the civil service. Only the mayor, comptroller, president of the board of assessors and members of the council will remain as elective officers.

Nearly all of the States of the Union, together with portions of Canada and Mexico, have sent exhibits to the fourth National Corn Exposition, which will be opened in Columbus, Ohio, Monday and continue for two weeks. In connection with the exposition there will be held a number of notable conferences to discuss conservation, rural life and agricultural problems.

Of interest to followers of sport and athletics will be the annual meeting in New York at the end of the week of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association and the Intercollegiate Football Rules Committee.

Happenings in January.
January has the credit of an event which has changed the world's history and which happened in our own country. Gold was discovered in California January 14, 1848. Seven years later, on January 27, 1855, the Panama railroad was opened and got its share of the gold of the returning Californians and the gold seekers who had money enough for travel by that route. And the first telegraph was established January 6, 1844, and the first penny post and postage stamps in the world came into being in England January 10, 1840.

How to Mend an Egg-Beater.
Don't throw away your Doyer egg-beater just because it "kicks" if it is otherwise good. Take some soft twine and twist tightly around under the head of the screw in the center of the wheel, until you have enough on to make it run firmly. It may wear off in a week or two, but is easily replaced, and I have found that it prolongs the working life of the egg-beater indefinitely.—Woman's Home Companion.

Inherent Riches.
There are thousands of people who have lost everything they valued in the world, all the material results of their lives' endeavor, and yet, because they possess stout hearts, unconquerable spirits, a determination to push ahead which knows no retreat, they are just as far from real failure as before their loss; and with such wealth they can never be poor.—Orison Swett Marden, in Success Magazine.

STANDARD BRINGS SUIT

OIL COMPANY ASKS $250,000 DAMAGES FOR LIBEL.

Hampton's Magazine and Cleveland Moffett, Writer, Are Made Defendants.

New York, Jan. 28.—The Standard Oil company brought suit here in the United States circuit court for $250,000 damages against the Broadway Publishing company, Inc., publishers of Hampton's Magazine, and Cleveland Moffett, the magazine writer.

The current issue of Hampton's contains an article in which it is alleged that subsidiaries of the Standard sell glucose to confectioners.

"The only possible connection between the Standard and the manufacture of glucose," said counsel for the Standard, "is that two men who do make glucose are on the Standard directorate."

So far as is recalled, the Standard Oil company has never brought suit before against any of the many publications that have attacked it.

CHINA ASKS AID OF WORLD

United States May Send Medical Experts to Help Stamp Out Plague in Far East.

Washington, Jan. 28.—In response to the invitation of China to all the leading powers of the world to send medical experts to study the plague conditions, the state department has cabled American Minister Calhoun at Peking asking if there are any American missionary physicians in China willing to serve.

The department also will take up the matter with the navy and treasury departments with a view of obtaining the services of naval surgeons and doctors of the public health and marine hospital service.

China is seeking the talent of the world to assist in suppressing the plague.

CONDEMNNS CIVIC FEDERATION

United Mine Workers' Convention Declare National Body Is a Foe to Organized Labor.

Columbus, O., Jan. 28.—By a vote of 497 to 369 the substitute offered to the motion condemning the National Civic federation as opposed to the interests of organized labor was adopted by the United Mine Workers of America.

This disposes of the original motion which called for the condemnation of the federation and the withdrawal of all the members of United Mine Workers from that organization and also the minority report which provided that no action regarding the Civic federation be taken.

TAFT PLANS TRIP TO SOUTH

President Will Make a Short Swing, Ending at Cincinnati, Soon After Congress Adjourns.

Washington, Jan. 28.—Early in March, immediately after congress adjourns, President Taft will make a short swing through the south, winding up at his home town, Cincinnati, where he will spend several days before returning to the national capital. The places he expects to stay at are Anderson, S. C.; Atlanta, Nashville, Chattanooga and Cleveland. He will be in Atlanta March 10 addressing the Southern Commercial congress. In Cincinnati he will speak to the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick March 17.

Charity and Individual Responsibility.

That organized charities relieve much suffering there can be no doubt, but they do not relieve any one of an individual responsibility toward his fellow creatures. If such a sense of responsibility ever dies organized charity will die with it.

The SKY-MAN

HENRY KITCHEN WEBSTER
STORY BY CHAS. W. ROSE
COPYRIGHT 1910 BY THE SUCCESS CO.

"For a little while Cayley stood hesitating before the fire, just where Jeanne, in her impulsive rush toward their rescuers, had left him, then slowly, he followed her.

"He was a Dark-Haired, Dark-Eyed Handsome Young Man."

pace, the distance between them was narrowing. Jeanne and young Fashaw were coming on ahead. He saw her stop suddenly and throw an arm around the man's neck. She was laughing and crying all at once, and there were tears in the man's eyes, too. Philip expected that. He knew that Fashaw loved her. His memory of that fact was all that redeemed his memory of their encounter on the Aurora's deck.

But, what he did not expect, was to see Fashaw suddenly release himself from the girl's embrace and come straight toward him. That was not the most surprising thing—not that, nor the hand which Fashaw was holding out to him. It was the look in the young man's face.

There was a powerful emotion working there, but no sign of any conflict, no resistance, no reluctance. It was the face of a man humble in the presence of a miracle. He stripped off his gauntlet and helped Cayley's hand. It was a moment, before he could speak.

"It's only just now," he said, "now that I see you here together, that I find it hard to believe. Because I've known all along that you were here with her, keeping her alive until we could get back to her. I've been the only one who has had any hope at all, and with me it's been a certainty rather than a hope. It's as if I had seen you here, together. I've seen you a thousand times, but now, that I do actually, with my own eyes, it's hard to . . . His voice broke there. There was a moment of silence, then he went on: "You must try to forgive me, Cayley—me, in particular, for I'm the one who needs it most. We know the truth of that old story now. No, it wasn't Jeanne who told it, it was poor Hunter himself, in a letter. He had written it long ago, and it was among his papers. I want you to read it sometime. I think, perhaps, when you do you will be able to forgive him, too."

"That's done already," said Philip. "No, not long ago—within the last few hours. Come, shall we go back to the fire? I suppose we had better wait for another moonrise before we try to get to the Aurora."

It was six months later, a blazing, blue July day, when the greatest Yorktown lifted North Head, the northern portal of the Golden Gate. Tom Fashaw and his father had gone to the bridge, but Philip and Jeanne, the other two passengers, remained unmoved by the announcement, seated as far aft as possible, the engine, limp in the following breeze, dithering just over their heads.

Looking up, they saw one of the Junior officers standing close beside them. He was a dark-haired, dark-eyed, good-looking youngster, whose frank adoration of Jeanne ever since they had come aboard had amused the Fashaws and secretly pleased and touched Philip, although he pretended to be amused, too.

"They both rose and lounged back against the rail as he came up."

"Glad to be nearly home, Mr. Caldwell?" said Jeanne. "You navy people regard any port in the States as home, don't you?"

"Oh, I'd be glad enough of a month's shore leave," he said, "if it weren't this particular voyage. I mean—if it didn't mean that we are going to lose you."

She gave him a friendly little smile, but made no other answer. He turned to Philip.

"I'll have to confess," he said, "to the rudest sort of inquisitive curiosity about the strange-looking bundle you brought aboard with you from the Aurora. It looks like some primitive Eskimo's attempt to build a flying-machine."

"It is something like that," said Philip. "If you'll have it brought up here on deck I'll open it to you."

The young fellow's pleasure was almost boyish. "I'll have it brought at once," he said.

The breeze was straight behind them and just about strong enough to compensate for the speed of the vessel, and the air on deck was quite still. With the boy's puzzled assistance Philip spread his wings for the first time since that night when he had dived off the cliff-head to go in pursuit of Iowee. The recollection was almost painfully vivid, and as he looked into Jeanne's face he saw the same memory mirrored there.

But young Caldwell soon brought them back to the present. He was no longer embarrassed or shy, deferential, a subject he knew all about. He criticized the shape of the planes, the material they were made of, the curve of this, the dip of that—all in the tone of an expert—and by way of summing up, he said:

"It's rather pitiful, isn't it? In a way any primitive thing always affects me—like old locomotives they have in museums. Somebody, probably, believed once that that would fly. I hope he didn't believe it seriously enough to give it a real trial."

"You don't think it would work, then?" asked Philip.

"The young man laughed. 'Dear me, no,' he said. 'It couldn't work.'"

"At any rate," said Philip, "it's an amusing curiosity."

"Oh, yes; indeed, yes," the young man assented, cordially. "I wish it were mine. Only I wouldn't try to fly with it."

His duties called him away then rather suddenly, and Philip was left to furl his wings alone. From the process he looked up into Jeanne's face.

"Why, Jeanne!" Her eyes were bright, bright with unshed tears, and there was a little flush of bright color in her cheeks.

"Oh, I know," she said, with an unsteady laugh, "it's absurd to be indignant, but I wished—oh, how I wished, when he was so patronizing and so sure, that you might have slipped your arms into their places and gone curreling, circling up, all gold and gleaming, into the air. I knew you wouldn't, but I hoped you would."

"Jeanne, dear," he said, "you'll remember that always—my flight, I mean. But, sometimes you'll get to wondering if it isn't the memory of a dream. And then you'll go and find these old wings in an attic, somewhere, and stroke them with your hands, the way you did that night when I furlled them first upon the ice-floe beside you."

She looked at him quickly, wide-eyed.

"What do you mean, Philip? Not that—not that I'm never to see you fly again?"

He nodded.

"Somehow, up there, with all the world below me, it never seemed real. Even you never seemed real, who were the only real thing in all the world. The earth was only a spinning ball, and there were no such things as men. I wasn't a man myself, up there, not even—when you had brought me back to life and given me a soul again. Somehow, to be a man one has to wear the shackles of mankind. I can't explain it better than that, but I know it's true."

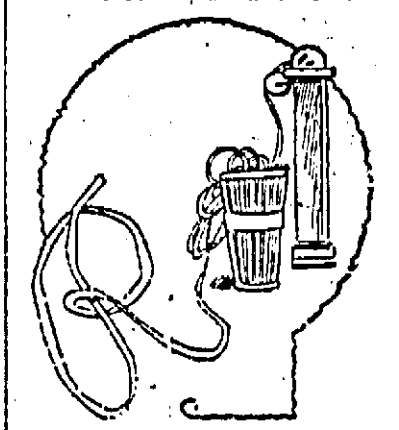

For a long time she searched his face in silence.

"You used to seem a spirit rather than a man to me," she said, "when I would be watching you soaring there above me. And now—now it's I who brought you down."

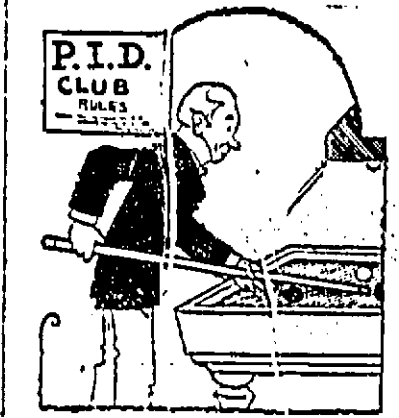

"Do you remember how I told you once that a man like your father was worth a whole Paradise of angels? Well, I want to be a man, Jeanne, as near as possible such a man as he was. And I want to walk beside you always."

A shift of wind from the east overlapped them and the great engine flapped forward, screening them for a moment where they stood, from the view of the rest of the deck. With a sudden passion of understanding she clasped him close and kissed him.

THE END.

Taking an Advantage.
Patience—And was I misled at the sewing circle today?
Patience—Indeed, you were.
"And did any of the women take advantage of my absence to say anything?"
"Oh, yes; two of them talked nearly the whole afternoon!"—Youkers Statesman.

Lesson in Etiquette.
"I was ashamed of you at that dinner last night; you made so much noise drinking your tea."
"Why, I was only sipping it. It was hot."
"I should say you were gargling. Why didn't you pour it into your saucer, the way I did?"

A Puzzler.
"Pop, you know everything, don't you?" said little Joe.
"Some very few things in the universe might have escaped me," answered the parent, modestly, "but they are hardly worth mentioning. What do you want to know?"
"I want to know," replied little Joe, "what relation an august king is to a May queen?"

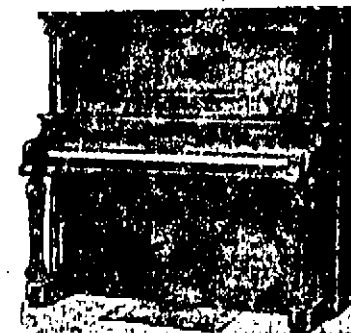

Growth of Girls and Boys.
A girl is nearly as big as a boy at two, smaller at four, nearly as big at seven, and the same height at 11. During the period from the eleventh to the fourteenth year, when the girl is growing more rapidly than the boy, she is generally bigger than he is.

A Fine Showing For The Newman Bros. Piano's

Below see the names of some of our local church and public halls where the NEW-MAN BROS. piano is in constant use and giving entire satisfaction.

Cargill Memorial M. E. Church, Janesville, Wis.
First Baptist Church.
Y. M. C. A. building, Janesville, Wis.
Daughters of Rebekah Hall.
Good Templars' Hall, Janesville, Wis.
Baptist Church, Evansville, Wis.
Royal Neighbors' Lodge, Evansville, Wis.
M. E. Church, Milton Jet, Wis.

If there are other churches or public halls wanting pianos, the music committee would do well to call and see the Newman Bros. piano before buying elsewhere.

The church and hall are a severe test on pianos account of the uneven temperature. Cold, heat and dampness do much to harm some pianos. But on account of the Newman Bros. piano being so well made and constructed is why they give entire satisfaction.

They are an ideal piano for the church, hall or the home; on account of their sweet tone, easy action, and great durability. Send for free catalogue.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

Among the immigrants awaiting examination at Ellis Island was a tall young fellow with a little black bag under his arm. He was a Pole, about 20 years old, and his admission was a pleasing and dramatic incident witnessed by Arthur Henry and described in Scribner's Magazine. The lesson it teaches is as good for native Americans as for immigrants.

When the young man's turn came to answer the inevitable question, "How much money have you?" he smiled and answered frankly, "None."

"But don't you know you can't come in here if you have no money and no friend to speak for you? Where are you going?"

"To Fall River first. I have a friend there. Then I shall see the whole country. I shall make money. You will hear of me."

The inspector proceeded rather sharply: "How will you get to Fall River? Where will you eat and sleep tonight?"

"I shall be all right," replied the young fellow, confidently. "With this"—tapping the black bag—"I can go anywhere."

"What is it?"

The Pole laughed, and opening the bag, took out a cornet. It was a fine instrument and gave evidence of loving care.

"Can you play it well?" asked the officer, more kindly.

In answer, the young Pole stepped out into an open space, and lifting the horn to his lips, began the beautiful intermezzo from "Cavalleria Rusticana." At the first note every one in the great building stood still and listened. The long lines of immigrants became motionless. The waiters in the pit looked on, and their faces became tender. Even the meanest among them seemed to feel the charm of the pleading notes.

When the music ceased there was a burst of applause. Shouts of "Bravo!" "Good boy!" "Give us some more!" came from every side. The officials who had a few moments before made their hurried and not over-gentle examination joined the applause. The inspector who had questioned him so sharply slapped him on the back. The commissioner himself had come up from his office at the sound of the horn, and asked for the particulars.

When he had heard them he turned to the agent of the Fall River boat and said, "Give this fellow a passage, including meals, and charge it to me."

"I will charge it to myself," said the agent, and he took the young Pole by the arm and led him away.

The incident was a sermon on competence; a lesson on what it means to be a master. The trade may be music or farming or bricklaying—it does not matter. The man who has conquered it, who knows it root and branch, can point to it as confidently as the young Pole pointed to his cornet, and say, as he did, "With this I can go anywhere."

This little story is suggestive of the fact that money is only one kind of capital. The young cornetist, a stranger in a strange land, possessed two things which insured independence, for they had a money value. One was ability to do one thing expertly; the other, a wholesome confidence in himself, which commanded respect.

He was not egotistical, and there was no conceit about his attitude. With no thought of advertising his ability as a musician he simply demonstrated that he possessed a talent well cultivated, which would take him anywhere, and the luck of ready money had not occurred to him as a drawback.

This is the sort of assurance which American boys can well afford to develop and cultivate. The value of money, as an asset, is often overestimated. In the ordinary course of business its earning power averages about six per cent, and it is so much more plentiful than brains that great blocks of it are little more than the Every bank statement published contains an item known as "certificates of deposits," and it is often a prominent item. This class of money is usually the property of people who fail to find an opportunity to invest it fully, and as money itself is an intimate thing, it continues to be idle.

The old parable of the talents, is a well defined statement of money as a motive power. The two men entrusted with five and ten talents, were speculators and made good, while the man with the smaller amount was so cautious that he wouldn't even loan the money, but hid it away for safe keeping. The ratio of one to three, may not always hold good, but during the last currency panic more than half the money of the country was in hiding because the people who owned it were afraid they would lose it.

Over against the class of people who hoard their money, is the much larger class who invest in all sorts of gold brick enterprises, and as money is powerless to protect itself, losses are of every day occurrence. It is so easy to lose that a large percentage of the men engaged in legitimate business, fall at some period of their career, and yet so easy to obtain that any man possessing honesty and ability to make money for himself, seldom suffers for lack of capital.

The story went the rounds of the press, a time ago, about the wealthy New Yorker who left a Broadway store with a friend to go over on a side street where he saved six cents on the purchase of a dollar shirt.

The friend smiled at his economy and suggested that he had earned the six cents. Taking a silver dollar out of his pocket, the other said: "Do you know it would take that dollar a year to earn six cents, and it only took me ten minutes."

That's the sort of economy which made the late Russell Sage famous and the type which is seldom practiced by boys who work for $10 a week.

The possession of money in large amount, is not possible to very many of us, because we like to see "the wheels go round," regardless of expense. But there are so many other things besides money, which enter into the history of everyday life, that the value of money, simply as a possession, fades to insignificance.

There are so many things which money will not buy, that the man is poor indeed whose sole dependence for peace and happiness is in the wealth which he possesses. About the first question asked concerning such people, when they are gone, is, "How much money did he leave?" and the safe answer is, "All he had." And it sometimes happens that the money left was the principal asset.

It would be better if the money could be taken along, on the last journey, for inherited wealth comes without effort, and is more often a curse than a blessing.

One of the choicest characters which ever blessed the community, died yesterday at the ripe age of four score years. Mrs. Flyer took with her the wealth of character accumulated during a long and helpful life, and it will serve her as a passport to any realm through the long ages of eternity.

She left a heritage of priceless value, bequeathed without stint or favor to the circle of friends and loved ones who enjoyed her companionship. The heritage of a memory which will linger like a benediction. Such a life has many possessions which money will not buy.

The boy with the cornet, waiting at the gateway of the world's great clearing house for a passport to admit him to the land of opportunity, was handicapped, not only for lack of money, but in various other ways which seemed discouraging.

He was obliged to talk through an interpreter. The customs of the country were new to him and every fact that greeted him was a strange face, but he was neither daunted nor discouraged, for he was endowed with a heart which inspired hope, and possessed with ability which filled him with courage and confidence.

This boy represents a class of boys of every nationality, who never fail. They come to this land from every land across the seas, and are soon swallowed up in the great tide of humanity struggling for a foothold.

If you have ever stood at the South ferry in New York, and watched for an hour the flow of immigrants landed at the government pier from Ellis Island, after a liner has discharged her cargo of human freight, the sight has impressed you, and you ask the question: "Where did all these people come from?" and "Where are they going?"

The man at your elbow, if he is a New Yorker, suggests that many of them will never know much of America, outside the great city where they landed. And that is true, for while New York is an American city, its industries, both commercial and industrial, are largely in the hands of captured citizens. They have been captured by men who have developed from the same stuff as that which entered into the life of the boy with the cornet at the clearing house.

What is true of New York, is true to greater or less extent of all our large cities, and the complexion of many of our farming districts, speaks for itself.

The American boy with all his advantages, is inclined to wait for opportunity, while his adopted brother wastes no time in waiting, but goes out after it.

Much is said about honesty as the foundation of character, but it is only the foundation, and unless material is added the structure of life will never progress. A man may be so honest that his word is better than his bond, and so lazy that his wife is obliged to support the family. So honest as to be recognized as a pillar in the church, and so "visionary" as to require a guardian.

Success in any calling is based on honesty plus ambition. Self-reliance, ability, thrift and economy combined with these graces are tact and intuition, which may be successfully cultivated. This is a kind of opportunity not always appreciated by men who enjoy it by the right of inheritance.

THE POET PHILOSOPHER
(Copyright, 1909, by George Matthew Adams.)
By WALT MASON.

I have heard a tale of a cheerful skater who died and went to the pearly gate, and asked if he might go in. St. Peter said: "Well, I like your looks, but I'll have to hunt around my set of books, and see if you're charged with sin." He pulled his ledger and daybooks down, and looked them through with a growing frown, and muttered: "Your name is Pence; in some divisions you stuck up high; you didn't swear and you didn't lie, and you didn't smoke or dance. You passed through life with a high renown, and you cut much grass in your native town, as my books do plainly show; but you had one habit that makes me frown; to enter darkness you must be free, and down with the gods you go. Your wife was over a patient soul, and though you carried a big fat roll, she always was lashed that she had to beg and she had to hint to pull a plank from your list of sin, whenever she the heathen guys sent long green to the whetted guinea because you thought it would advertise the play of your soul but your wife must get on her marrowbones, and always you filled the house with moans, whenever you drew your roll. So choose yourself to the dread abode where the virtuous meet by the wagonload, and the weather's always dry a man like you in our realm of grace could far the saints till they'd jump the place, and start up another sky."

Heart to Heart Talks.
By EDWIN A. NYE.

SMILE!
Do not retail your woes.
Smile. And if you cannot smile grin and bear it.
The world is not interested in your troubles. It has troubles of its own.
Even though you may feel bad hold up your chin and present to the world a smiling face. When you can no longer be cheerful with your affliction take it home with you and hide it.
Smile.
Your sympathies should reach you to be more sympathetic with your troubled brother. Do not add your woes to his.
A nobleman of ancient times, it is said, constructed a great aeolian harp by stringing wires from one tower of his castle to another. And then when the summer zephyrus blew he listened for the music.
There was not a murmur.
But by and by came the chilling blasts of winter. Under the influence of the cold the wires grew taut as the strings of a keyed violin, and, lo, there came from the harp the most thrilling harmonies!
So let it be with the harp of your soul.
When the chilly blasts of a cold world strike and the winds of adversity blow let your spirit give out its sweetest harmonies of good cheer and of kindness.
Here is a strange thing:
When people say "How do you do?" or "How do you feel?" they do not want to know the truth if the truth requires a retort of woes and a catalogue of private catastrophe.
It is the way of the world.
If one is not well in body or spirit it is well enough to say so and let it go at that. Make an ending. Prepare no exhibit of harrowing details. Life is too short to listen to the endless measures of a never ending misere.
Remember "Smiling Joe?"
Joe was a poor little consumptive so frail that he had to be strapped to a board day and night for years. But he was always smiling. They took his picture and printed his story, and people who walked of the trivial life were ashamed.
And the face of Smiling Joe and the tale of his patient sufferings brought in thousands of dollars to be used in giving poor consumptive children a chance at the seashore and the sunshine.
Put the soft pedal on your personal griefs.
Smile and the world smiles with you. Frown and you frown alone.

TALKS ON SUBJECT OF MUCH INTEREST

Madison, Wis., Jan. 28.—A warning against permitting restrictions on the proposed initiative and referendum act that will make it worthless was given this afternoon by George Hudson King, chief lecturer for the National Association League, addressing the Saturday lunch club. Prominent men in the legislature and state officials and representatives in the city's civic life and the university heard the address. Gov. McGovern is one of the members. Other speakers on the subject today were Prof. E. A. Ross and Herbert Quick.

Mr. King said in part:
"Direct legislation is the next step ahead. The world has tried every form of government. Laws and institutions have been framed and handed down from monarchies, oligarchies, aristocracies, and elected legislatures. In the long run they all have failed to accomplish that first, ostensible object of their existence—equal rights to an equal privilege to none. There is just one method for us to try, just one remaining source of directive power on which to rely—the people. Shall we give to the people a chance? That is the greatest question mark in the American political life today. But even as we put the question it is answered. For, whatever you or I may think about the desirability of the initiative and referendum, whatever the bosses and masters may say or do, the people have given reply. They are going to seize these powers. They are weary of waiting. They have learned at last to trust themselves. They see a way to make the American dream of justice come true."

"In this battle for battle it is, Wisconsin now plays a prominent part. As I go from state to state, I find no commonwealth more eagerly watched and inquired about. Oregon and Wisconsin are twin sister states of progress and it was especially fitting that your legislature send greetings to the Oregon legislature as it did a few days ago. I know of no state in which there is so great a number of men in the legislature bent on the conservation of the common good, and whose hearts so quickly respond to that magic word—'service.'"

"Wisconsin is to have the initiative and referendum. The republican state platform said, 'We favor giving to the people the power to propose laws and amendments to the constitution and to adopt or reject the same at the polls and to reject by their vote any act of the legislature. We pledge ourselves to constitutional amendments providing for the initiative and referendum and the recall.' Governor McGovern in his message said, 'I most earnestly urge the passage of a joint resolution by this legislature for the submission to the people of an amendment... so drawn as to permit the exercise by the people of the powers of the initiative and referendum.' Senator La Follette, as is well known, is a national champion of this movement and is advancing it in every way he possibly can."

"The question remains, what sort of an amendment will Wisconsin have? Here lies your danger. Powerful pressure will be brought by the special interests, not so much to defeat the submission of an amendment, since they know they cannot control this legislature, but to cut out restrictions upon the amendment so that it will be worthless when in actual use. They will seek to have the percentage of signatures on petitions so high that the habit of securing the names will be prohibitive to the common people. They will ask that huge majorities may be necessary to enact laws proposed by the people, and render the initiative valueless as they did in Oklahoma. They will demand a wide distribution of petitions, a feature which practically killed the Montana amendment. The proposed Nebraska amendment, if passed, will be worthless for this reason. 'Jokers' allure will be suggested in an effort to hobnob with the whole instrument. Your own Prof. Commons has pointed out that the success of the initiative and referendum in practical use depends upon the details. He well understands the danger of these restrictions. I trust your legislature will not be misled by any subterfuges of the enemy, but that Wisconsin yet will give the best amendment yet framed in the United States—even better than Oregon has; that your statesmen will show their confidence in the good sense of the people, will give them an initiative and referendum by means of which the will of the people may be easily and freely expressed, and your state so continue in her glorious leadership."

EXPECT CRISIS IN SPAIN SOON
los. We have majorities everywhere. A large majority of Spaniards are already Republicans, in short.
"They don't win elections everywhere, however. But that is because the Conservative and Liberal votes."
"And will Premier Canalejas agree to the Forner revision or not? The Premier seems to have answered that question himself some time ago. If I had been in Senator Maure's place, he said, 'the verdict against Forner would have been the same. But whether I should have exercised clemency is another matter. Perhaps I should—I'm not sure.'"
One of the most surprising things about Senator Soriano is the boldness with which he talks—prophesying revolutions, the upsetting of governments and the fall of the thrones. Most Spaniards are very cautious about this while the present regime endures. But Senator Soriano thinks the present government so hard pressed and the Republicans so strong that he does not believe the former will dare to precipitate trouble by acting until it is literally driven into doing so.

HUGE RANSOM SOUGHT

KIDNAPERS DEMAND FORTUNE TO RELEASE STOLEN GIRL.
Daughter of Francis R. Arnold of New York Has Been Missing From Home Since December 12.
New York, Jan. 28.—Lawyers of Francis R. Arnold, the wealthy perfume importer whose daughter Dorothy has been missing from her home since December 12, admitted that two letters demanding a ransom for the young woman had been received by Mr. Arnold within 24 hours.
One of the letters, Mr. Arnold said, demanded more money than he could possibly raise, although he is rated as a millionaire.
Garvan & Armstrong, the lawyers directing the search, are not inclined to regard the missives seriously. They declare that anyone holding Miss Arnold for a ransom would have communicated with her relatives weeks ago. The young woman has been missing for more than six weeks, and every clue has been run to earth.
"Both letters are from criminals," Mr. Arnold said at his home. "One of them evidently is from an ordinary blackmailer. I attach some importance to the other, for the man who wrote it seems to know something about what happened to my daughter. Both letters are postmarked New York city."
"I am still certain that my daughter has met with foul play. She has either been kidnapped or murdered."

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 27.—Uncertain whether two grains of morphine he had taken would kill him, William Choff, who recently came from Detroit in an unsuccessful quest for work, shot himself through the left lung and then drank carbolic acid. He died in a few minutes.

WOMAN KILLED; SON IS HELD

Tragedy Occurs at Terre Haute, Ind., When Mother and Boy Are Alone in House.
Terre Haute, Ind., Jan. 28.—Mrs. Josephine Bell, fifty-two years old, was shot and killed in her home here and her fifteen-year-old son is being held by the police. The lad and his mother were the only persons in the house. When taken into custody the boy said that the rifle was discharged by falling on the floor. He collapsed and his condition became so serious that he was placed under a physician's care.

CONVICT 23 FOR MASSACRE

Survivors of Sinking Haitian Warship Sentenced to Die for Killing Seventy Persons.
Port au Prince, Haiti, Jan. 28.—Twenty-three officers, noncommissioned officers and sailors, survivors of the wreck of the Haitian gunboat Liberte, which sank at sea off Port de Paix last October following an explosion, were tried by a military tribunal. They were charged with mutiny.
They were found guilty of connection with the massacre of the admiral of the Liberte and several Haitian generals who were on board and of burning the boat.
All were condemned to death. Reports of the disaster to the Liberte estimated that seventy persons were killed or drowned. No mention was made in the dispatches of a mutiny.

CEMENT COTTAGES FOR POOR

Method for Construction of Cheap but Substantial Homes for Working Classes.

London.—Two neat little tiled cottages at Newlands Corner, near Guildford, stand for a practical and successful effort to deal with one of the most pressing questions of English rural life—the problem of cheap housing.

In building these comfortable, well ordered dwellings for two of his undergardens at a cost for the two of $1,500, St. Leo Strachey, editor of the Spectator, has justified the faith which he publicly expressed and which moved him to promote the Cheap Cottages exhibition at Leithworth in 1905.

The argument which Mr. Strachey then advanced and has now established is this: The agricultural laborer cannot afford to pay more than $1.50 a week house rent out of his wages. Any improvement in his dwelling above that standard must ordinarily be provided by philanthropy. The obvious way to cope with this situation is to cheapen the cost of construction.

This Mr. Strachey, in cooperation with a local builder, has done by using for the walls of his cottage concrete blocks made in molds on the spot. The ground floors of the cottages have a scullery, a pantry and a large kitchen sitting room, from which an open staircase leads picturesquely to the upper story of three bedrooms.

As Mr. Strachey points out, this extraordinarily low cost of $1,500 for a pair of cottages—$2,250 is the figure usually accepted—has been reached not only by the employment of cheap material but by rigid exclusion of showy and unnecessary ornament, by dispensing with an architect and by leaving only a small margin for builder's profit. At the same time he maintains that his experiment has shown that it would be possible for any country landlord to house his people at the same cost by employing the labor and material of his estate. Further, Mr. Strachey asserts, the addition of $50 to the sale value of the cottages would turn them into a profitable venture for the commercial builder.

Only a Temporary Advantage.

The gift of good looks is of such primary advantage to every man, that it seems a wonder how ugly people manage so frequently to excel those who have it in the battle of life.—Payne.

HIGH SCHOOL TEAM DEFEATED JEFFERSON IN EXCITING GAME

Local Players Were Victors in Game At Jefferson By Score of 23 to 23.

—Forum Won From Rusk.

In a fast contest of unusual roughness the Janesville high school basketball team defeated the Jefferson five at the latter place by the score of 23 to 23 last evening. The local players put forth their best efforts and at end of the first half were leading by a margin of seven points, the figures being 15 to 8.

Jefferson came back in the second half with a fair determination to win, however, which for a short time seemed in a way to be realized. They played hard and fast with a roughness that made fouls frequent. At one time early in the half the score stood 15 to 11, but the Janesville players rallied and shooting baskets in superb form brought the final score to 23 to 23.

Cunningham's basket shooting was the feature of the game. He scored a total of 12 points, with two field goals in the first half and four in the second. Korat also played a hard game and likewise added 12 points to the Janesville score, with eight field goals and four fouls. The teams were about evenly matched as to speed and skill and the game was exciting throughout. A number from here witnessed the contest.

Lineup—Janesville—Hemming, C; Korat, R; Cunningham, R; Brown, C; Baker, R; Fuller and Mott, substitutes. Jefferson—K. Rusk, C; A. Henry, R; Hagen, R; H. Henry, R; R. Rusk, R.

Score—Field goals—Jefferson: K. Rusk, 4; A. Henry, 2; R. Rusk, 1. Janesville: Hemming, 2; Korat, 4; Cunningham, 8; Brown 1.

Fouls—K. Rusk, 9; Hemming, 3; Korat, 4.

Officials—Tornau and Simpson of Madison.

Forum vs. Rusk.

In the first of series of basketball contests to be played between the Rusk, Jefferson and Forum Literary Society, the Forum defeated the former organization in an enthusiastic contest at the high school gymnasium last evening, by the score of 19 to 6.

Scintillating stellar performances by various members of both teams offered plenty of excitement for the throng of rooters which turned out for the game. Noyes and Metcalf are mentioned as special stars of the occasion.

One feature was that the critics of the respective societies threw the fouls. Prof. L. Rusk threw four out of six for the Rusk and Prof. Wm. Vroman succeeded in scoring two out of four times for the Forum. The lineup:

Rusk—Wilkinson, C; French and Laughlin, forwards; McArthur and Kelly, guards.

Forum—Metcalf, center; McArthur and Noyes, forwards; Holway and Hanson, guards.

Field goals—Metcalf, 2; McArthur, 1; Noyes, 1; French, 1.

Games At Edgerton.

A picked-up team from the local Y. M. C. A. played with the Edgerton Midway at Edgerton last evening and defeated them with the score of 17 to 12.

Beloit high school team also played the Edgerton high school team in a fast contest which resulted in the close score of 21 to 23 in favor of Edgerton. The broadhead team easily defeated Edgerton.

Lineup in Janesville—Edgerton game—Janesville—McCaffrey, center; Hemming and Sullivan, forwards; Dalton and McCue, guards.

Edgerton—Metcalf, center; Moon and Ogden, forwards; Hubble and Sutton, guards.

Officials—Hazen and Jensen.

WILL BE BURIED ON SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Funeral of the Late Mrs. Mary A. Hyzer Will Be Held at 2:30 Tomorrow.

On Sunday afternoon, at two-thirty, from her late residence, 326 South Jackson street, the funeral of Mrs. Mary A. Hyzer, widow of the late Jacob B. Hyzer, will be held, Rev. T. D. Williams of Cargill Memorial Methodist church and Rev. David Benton of the First Congregational church officiating. The pallbearers will be Fred Burpee, Frank Judeman, P. S. Sheldon, P. J. Mount, W. E. Hyzer, and H. T. Hyzer. Interment will be at Oak Hill cemetery.

Mrs. Hyzer was one of God's noble women. The life she lived was an open book. Childlike in simplicity, yet strong and courageous, for her heart was inspired by a faith which enabled her to catch glimpses beyond the veil, and the religion she enjoyed was so intensely real that it satisfied and comforted in all the vicissitudes of a long and eventful journey.

She talked with God as she talked to a friend, for she lived in His abiding presence and her confidence in Him was like the confidence of a child. Her voice of supplication in the prayer meetings of the church she loved so well, were always a revelation, and the eloquence of her pleading impressed the thought that she lived hard by the throne and merited recognition.

She loved children and was a regular attendant of the Sunday school. The warm hand-clasp and the word of cheerful greeting inspired many a boy and girl with courage for the conflict.

Wanting to be of service to her church whenever opportunity offered she devoted some time the last year of her life to collecting funds for its support, and her last report was filed just before her death.

The record of this life is closed, but its influence lives on, and as memory can back the kindly face and pleasant voice, to the friends who enjoyed Mrs. Hyzer's love and confidence, they will be comforted by the thought that she lived to a purpose and passed on in the fullness of years, to her reward.

ANOTHER TOURNAMENT HAS BEEN SCHEDULED

Beloit and Janesville Elks Bridge Whist Teams To Meet On Monday Evening.

Not content with three decisive defeats the Line City Elks, who are members of the bridge whist team of that city are most anxious for another try at the county seat players. Captain Burnham of the local players, has invited the Beloit men to be the first to play at five forty five and later to evening next, at a dinner at the Myers hotel at six forty five and later to play bridge at the Elks club rooms.

The Beloit contingent will arrive on a special car over the interurban at 5:30 and return on the same special at 11:30 at the conclusion of the bridge games. Captain Burnham has arranged for a most elaborate menu at the Myers and requests that all the twenty members of the Janesville team be present at the hotel at five forty five to help entertain the visitors. The teams will be matched the same as at Beloit playing as follows:

Richard and McGee with Parker and Melrose, Holmes and Hinkins with E. J. Rottler and Van Wart, Chapman and Valentine with Eldred and Thompson, Welsh and Stern with Murray and Lyons, Van Kleck and Levy with Osborn and Wellick.

Francis and Keeney with Coney and Worthington, Hinkins and Long with L. L. Bradley and Elford, Sullivan and Reiberg with Kellogg and Gilman, Simpson and McCoy with Holman and Lipman, Harris and Clark with Yates and Randall, and Clark and Hendrich with M. Rottler and T. C. Hendrich.

Swiss Messaline

If you want to see the most beautiful quality Messaline that you ever took hold of, ask to see our imported silk messaline. This silk was manufactured to retail for $1.50 per yard. A change in duty made it impossible to import it and retail it at $1.50, so the importer in New York, who had several thousand pieces on hand, closed it all out at a bargain figure. We bought a liberal supply at a bargain price that enables us to sell this 23-inch Swiss Messaline at $1.00 yard.

APPARATUS FOR NEW TELEPHONE EXCHANGE HERE

Big Switchboard For New Exchange With Crew Of Experts Arrives Today Ready For Installation.

The switchboard for the new exchange of the Wisconsin Telephone Company, to be situated at the corner of Milwaukee and Division streets, together with a crew of expert installers from the Western Electric Company of Chicago, arrived in the city and it is expected that the new equipment will be ready for use in about 90 days.

The central office equipment is divided generally into two parts, the local and toll. A separate switchboard will be provided to handle the local work and as Janesville is an important toll center, a separate toll board will be furnished to take care of the long distance messages.

The new building and the local switchboard are arranged to take care ultimately, of 24 operator's positions with an equipment at present for eight. The toll board is arranged for a possible 12 operators with a present capacity of 6. After the installation of this new equipment, the people of Janesville will be served by the same type of switchboard as is used in the larger offices in the city of New York which is the largest telephone exchange in the world.

When the new board is brought into service, it will no longer be necessary for the patrons to turn the crank to get central as the act of removing the receiver from the hook will cause a light to appear in front of the operator, telling her of a call. The same is true or ringing off under the new system. The batteries at the individual stations will be done away with and the current will be furnished by a large motor at the central office. This system is called the central energy system.

The magnitude of the new central office equipment can be better seen when it is realized that inside of the building alone there will be over 500,000 soldered connections and that within the plant, five and one-third miles of wire will be used. Ultimately the office equipment will provide for 7000 subscribers in the city of Janesville, at present having provisions for 3000.

The company, when the new central office is installed, will have spent about four months laying underground conduits and overhead wires, involving an expense of about $75,000.

YOUNG PEOPLE GAVE SPLENDID PROGRAM

Entertainment At Baptist Church Last Night Was Greatly Enjoyed By Large Crowd.

Members of the Young People's society of the Baptist church last evening gave a very pleasing entertainment in the parlors of the church. A splendid program followed by a play in pantomime was presented. The Sunday school gave the opening number under two sections. Miss Phil Shookster and Mrs. How in a dialogue entitled, "Maudie's Puff" won the plaudits of the audience. Miss Edith Clark and Ernest Clark sang a duet and little Miss Esther Barker was cheered for her reading. A recitation by the orchestra and vocal solo by Miss Roberts were worthy of the applause they received. The play, "Wanted A Wife," scored a hit. Each of the parts which go to portray the troubles of a bachelor in selecting the right woman from among the number who answer his advertisement for a wife, were cleverly taken. A large crowd attended the entertainment.

NEIGHBORHOOD ROW TAKEN INTO COURT

Mrs. Mary Henderson of South Main Street Alleged to Have Struck Her Daughter.

When parents interfere in the squabbles of their children, a neighborhood row is generally the result. Circumstances of this nature brought about the issuance of a complaint against Mrs. Mary Henderson, residing at 1915 Sharon street, and her appearance in municipal court this morning on a charge of assault and battery for the alleged striking of little Pauline Henderson, daughter of Mrs. Mary Henderson, 746 South Main street. The complaint was made through Attorney J. J. Cunningham, who appeared in court this morning for Mrs. Henderson. Bryant claimed that his own daughter with a stick, "to save her life" he said. The stick with which Bryant is alleged to have struck the Henderson child was produced in court. In order to learn the full particulars of the trouble Judge Field adjourned the case until next Saturday, when an attempt will be made to adjust the matter.

WERE OVERCOME BY FUMES OF COAL GAS

Fred Lemke, Aged 75, and Grandson, Eric Graff, Rescued From Asphyxiation by Clarence Graff.

Fred Lemke, an aged resident of the city, was overcome and his grandson, Eric Graff, sufficed from the effects of inhaling coal gas which escaped from a stove on Thursday night. Mr. Lemke, who is seventy-five years old, has been living alone at his home, 625 South Academy street. One of his grandsons, however, staying with him at night. Yesterday morning at eight o'clock another grandson, Clarence Graff, went to the house to arouse his brother and grandfather. After he had knocked and found that his brother was not answering, he unlocked the door and then fell over unconscious. Dr. G. W. Field was called and revived both the boy and the man, working over the latter for two hours. The two suffered no ill-effects from their experience and were reported as fully recovered from it today. The escape of a draft in the stove forced the gas into the rooms of the house.

WORD RECEIVED OF LOCAL MAN'S DEATH

John Griffin, Better Known As "Dab," Died in Milwaukee Yesterday.

John Griffin, well known to many in the city as "Dab," died yesterday in the county hospital at Milwaukee. Information to this effect was received in a letter to Chief of Police Appleby from Urvan V. Sillaway, superintendent of the Milwaukee Rescue Mission, today. The message stated that Griffin was taken sick on November 18, 1910, and was sent to the county hospital on the twentieth. The cause of death was not stated and relatives here can assign no reason for his demise. That he was discharged from the hospital as cured from whatever illness he was suffering, is inferred from the fact that he was in Janesville about six weeks ago. He was seen by members of his family residing here and showed no visible signs of illness. A brother of the deceased, David Griffin, left for Milwaukee this noon and it is expected the remains will be brought here tonight at 8:45 on the Northwestern road.

SENATOR BAILEY DEFENDS LORIMER

Admits He Would Give Illinois
Man His Seat.

CUMMINS RESUMES SPEECH

Iowan Upholds the Confession of Accused White as Against "Manufactured Evidence" of Browne and Wilson.

Washington, Jan. 28.—Senator Joseph W. Bailey of Texas, chief defender of William Lorimer in the United States senate, was placed on the rack in the senate by Senators Cummins and Borah and forced to admit that he would seat a senator elected by bribery unless, in his judgment, the corrupt votes cast for him decided the result. Senator Bailey refused to admit that the seven corrupt votes held by Senator Cummins and Borah to have been cast for Lorimer on the day of his election, and which, if deducted from his total of 108, would have reduced his strength to 101, or one less than a constitutional majority on that day, had decided the issue. He insisted that the seven corrupt votes should be deducted from the total vote cast, thereby leaving Lorimer a majority.

Cummins Resumes Speech.
Senator Cummins resumed his discussion of the report of the senate committee on privileges and elections upholding Lorimer. The purpose of Mr. Cummins' remarks was to uphold the confession of Representative Charles A. White, in the course of which he denounced the testimony of Representatives Browne and Wilson as "manufactured testimony" in so far as it was claimed in it that the St. Louis meeting of southern Illinois representatives with them was for the purpose of arranging a banquet for Browne.

HOTEL GUESTS IN A PANIC

Men and Women in Scant Attire Flee
Down Iron Ladders and Stairs
—None Injured.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—Guests of two of the big hotels—the Great Northern and the Majestic—scrambled down fire escapes, crowded into elevators and down stairs to escape a fire that originated on the eighteenth floor of the Majestic hotel building, in St. Hubert's grill, early today.

The restaurant was crowded with after-theater diners when an explosion came place back in the kitchen shook the structure. A moment later there was a burst of flames that shot across the ceiling into the room.

Within a few minutes after the first explosion the flames had burst through the roof and licked at the outer walls of the building. By this time the excitement had been communicated to the guests of the hotel. Clerks and bellboys ran from room to room awakening the guests and endeavoring to calm the frightened women. Next there began an exodus of half-dressed men, women and children to the streets.

The fire engines finally succeeded in getting sufficient water to the fire to extinguish it without great loss to the building.

SANTA FE EX-HEAD DIES

Former President J. W. Reinhart Succumbs in Kansas City at the Age of Fifty-Nine.

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 28.—Joseph W. Reinhart, formerly president of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad, and more recently president of the Kansas City Viaduct and Terminal company, died here. He was fifty-nine years old.

In 1889, while general auditor of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad, with offices in Boston, he formulated the plan by which the reorganization of the road was effected. In 1893 he was elected president of the system and served for two years.

Mr. Reinhart was appointed chief railroad expert of the United States government in 1893-4.

OPPOSE SEATING OF POWERS

Congressman Macon Declares Kentucky
Lan Convicted in Goshel Murder
Has No Right in House.

Washington, Jan. 28.—The seating of Representative-elect Caleb E. Powers of Kentucky will be opposed on the floor of the house by Representative Robert Bruce Macon (Dem.) of Arkansas.

Mr. Macon announced that he will base his argument against seating Powers on the ground that no man ever convicted of murder, even though subsequently pardoned, is entitled to a seat in congress.

On account of Powers' connection with the Goshel murder, it has been repeatedly predicted that his induction into office would be combated on the floor.

Warship Carries Dead Diplomat.

A LAMENT.

I'm getting tired of gloomy days
Without a gleam of sun;
Oppressive this of browns and grays,
And roses sweet—not one!

I'd like to hear the birds sing,
Just as they used to do,
When frolic airs came o'er the hills
And all the skies were blue;

And every field was daisy-starred
And every hedge a glow
With silver drops of morning dew
And violets in a row.

In vain has tolling fancy wrought
A scene where all is fair—
Outdoors a drear landscape lies,
Nor warmth nor cheer is there.

Simple Remedy.

Violette—I wish you would tell me how to get this puch off my dress.
I have tried everything I can think of.
Reginald—You might try a song.
You always get off the puch when you sing.

acquainted with the merchants.

Little Bed-Time Tales

By EDITH HAVENS

The Banquet of the Chipmunks

IT WAS not altogether quiet in the heart of the woodland. A scraping sound could be heard in among the trees. If you and I had been walking by we could not have told where the sound came from but anywhere there was an unmistakable sound.

What do you think it was?

Well, it was the chipmunks inside of the countless hollow tree trunks and they were just awaking from a long sleep preparatory to attending the annual chipmunk banquet which always comes some time in January.

You remember these saucy brown little fellows skipping along the stone walls in the summer time; how they are constantly looking out for food; how they never seem to eat any of it but to scamper off to some place as if to hide it?

Well, that is just what they do. They store it away so that when the cold winter time comes they will have quantities of it for their annual banquet.

They had been asleep ever since the last days of fall and now they were just waking up. The banquet was to occur that night. Within the trunk of one of the larger oak trees the king of the chipmunks and his family were busier than all the rest. It was they who took charge of all fares. It was the King's children who rushed out into the cold air from tree to tree spreading the news that the banquet was to be held that evening.

Even now the King was giving them final instructions.

The snow on the ground was a bit cold at first but they did not mind and up one tree and down another they ran shouting in every chipmunk hole they could find.

It was already beginning to get dark and presently from every chipmunk home there fairly poured great and little chipmunks. Each carried grain and nuts and other things and they were headed straight for the old oak tree where the King Chipmunk lived.

In the meantime the King Chipmunk had not been idle. He had built a huge fire underneath the tree and as if by magic the snow had melted away.

How merry the brown little fellows were. It was good to stretch their legs after the long sleep. And how the food did pile up as each little family arrived.

The last to arrive were the King's children and then everything was ready to start.

Would you not like to have pecked in through the trees and seen this wonderful gathering?

They were eating now and between mouthfuls they sang funny little chipmunk songs.

Had they not earned this good time after working so hard all summer long?

"You must be sure and tell them to bring all the food they gathered last summer," he said.

"All right," shouted the children, and out of the great trunk-hole and down the tree they scampered.

DO FANCY WORK!! OH FUDGE, LEAVE THAT TO THE SCHOOL GIRLS

MAKE MY OWN CLOTHES! WHY I COULDN'T EVEN STICK A NEEDLE IN A PIN CUSHION

FAST MAIL HELD UP

YOUNG MAN ROBS COLORADO
AND SOUTHERN PASSENGERS.

Robber Secures $117 in Cash and Much Jewelry—Is Wounded and Jailed.

Pueblo, Colo., Jan. 28.—A score of passengers in the Pullman sleeper attached to the Texas fast mail, on the Colorado & Southern railroad, were held up and robbed by a young man, who singlehandedly compelled them to hold their hands above their heads while he went through the car from end to end and relieved them of all they had in the way of money and jewelry.

His total loot amounted to $117 in cash and a quantity of jewelry. After having robbed the car full of passengers, he failed to make good his escape and is now in jail here with a bullet through his right wrist.

The train left Denver at 12:15 bound for Texas points. When it stopped at Dossomer, a small station a few miles from Pueblo, a well-dressed young man boarded the day coach. After the train had started he went through the train toward the rear, passing the conductor on the way. Reaching the Pullman at the tail end of the train, he drew a revolver and yelled, "Hands up!" Every person in the sleeper obeyed his command. The robber then searched each of them, taking everything of value they possessed. As he completed his work he pulled the bell-cord, bringing the train to a standstill.

Just as he jumped from the train William McCafferty, a special agent of the Denver & Rio Grande railroad, who was in the forward part of the train and who had started back on hearing the signal to stop the train, reached the Pullman and poked his head in the door. A yell from the passengers that they had been robbed brought the attention home to McCafferty at once. The robber had in the meantime jumped from the car and started to run. McCafferty drew his gun and fired at the retreating bandit, wounding him in the right wrist. After a short chase he gave himself up and all the money and jewelry was recovered. He was brought to Pueblo and placed in jail. He gave his name as Al Buckley, but refused any further information concerning himself.

"Not always," rejoined the demoralizer. "Some persons think of so much meaner things to say on second thought that I'd rather hear their first thought pertaining to the subject."

INNER-PLAYER PIANOS

Remember this title, Inner-Player, and remember also that an Inner-Player Piano is a piano containing the famous Inner-Player device.

Ordinary player pianos are often called "Inner Player" Pianos and you must therefore guard against confusing any of these instruments with the genuine.

Bear in mind that the only instruments to which the name Inner-Player applies are those made by The Cable Company, Chicago.

These Inner-Player Pianos are guaranteed for five years and the guarantee applies to both the piano and the player device. Every buyer receives the manufacturer's written warranty.

Many other player mechanisms are not guaranteed at all, while others are guaranteed for one year only. Why should you buy that kind when you can get an Inner-Player?

At least let us show you how easily you can play any piece of music on one, even if you have never had a piano lesson. You can buy on easy terms.

MADISON TEAM WAS EASILY DEFEATED

Lakota Cardinals Won From St. George's Society Basketball Team by Score of 33 to 8 Last Night.

The Lakota Cardinals scored an easy victory over the basketball team of St. George's society of Madison last evening in a game at the West Side roller rink. The Madison five struggled bravely to make a showing but roller rink. The Madison five struggled 33 to 8.

The Cardinals took the ball toward the Madison goal at the outset of the contest, but were unsuccessful in attempts to throw the ball into the basket. Finally after several minutes of saw-sawing back and forth, Sennott dropped the sphere through the net. After the start was made, it was less difficult for the Jansville players to score and seven more field throws were counted. One point was given the Cardinals for a foul by a Madison player. Madison's one point was made on a free throw. The score at the end of the half was 17 to 1. In the second half the Madison team was more fortunate, gaining six points on field baskets and one on a foul. Eight baskets were thrown by the Cardinals. Murphy was substituted for Robertson in the last half of the game. Brown, left forward, was the star of the St. George five and his work was particularly applauded by the crowd. The Madison manager, the Cardinals played quite as well as usual, although he had just recovered from a stage of sickness. Last evening's match was the final one for Glenn Robertson, left forward, who left today for Chicago to enter a business school there.

The details of the game: Jansville: Murphy and Robertson, left forward; Cunningham, right forward; Sennott, center; Langdon, right guard; Green, left guard. St. George's: Miller, right forward; Brown, left forward; Knoche, center; Danhol, left guard; Link, right guard. Field baskets: Sennott, 7; Langdon, 4; Cunningham, 4; Brown, 3; Robertson, 1. Free throws: Knoche, 2. Gifts: 1, to Jansville.

TALKED ON TRAINING OF THE YOUNG MAN

Interesting Addresses at Meeting of Men's Club of Presbyterian Church Last Evening.

"Moral Training of the Young Man" was the subject for discussion at the meeting of the Men's club of the Presbyterian church, last evening. The meeting was under the leadership of Samuel Smith and interesting talks were heard by Judge Charles Filfield, Prof. L. P. Rahr and J. C. Kline.

Officers for the following year were elected and are as follows: L. P. Rahr, president; J. C. Barker, vice president; O. W. Alton, secretary; Roy Jackson, treasurer. There was a committee appointed to meet with a like delegation from some of the other clubs and try and arrange for a joint meeting some time in the near future. Prof. Rahr, in speaking of the moral training of the young men of today, said that the purpose of the education of the 20th century is to fit the boy and girl to grapple with the affairs of the world, and in order to do this the education must be three-fold—intellectual, physical and moral. He said that the physical education was necessary for both boys and girls. He pointed out also, that the Sunday school was the means in these days whereby the youth could gain his moral training, and that the home life was another strong element in this training. In speaking of this moral education of the home, he said: "Hundreds of the world's greatest men have declared that they owe their careers to their mothers, the prayers who taught them and the simple moral truth she repeatedly emphasized to them."

GOOD RESULTS FROM TRAINING SCHOOL

Prof. C. H. Dietz of Green County Training School Reports Most Successful Semester.

(Special to the Gazette.)

Monroe, Wis., Jan. 28.—Prof. C. H. Dietz of the Green county training school for teachers, reports a most successful semester just closed. The school has had a splendid enrollment and when the second semester begins Monday, a number of new students will begin the courses of studies offered. The half year just ended has been most profitable to the students preparing for positions in grade work. Prof. Dietz has had many demands for teachers who have had training, and no doubt the pupils who finish in June will be able to secure good positions. The students will take up the following course of study for the next semester: Composition, literature, physiology, practice teaching and United States history.

The juniors have outlined in their course: English history, composition, primary construction, arithmetic, expressive reading and algebra.

The results of the school since its removal to this city from Brookfield have been most promising and Monroe citizens feel highly gratified with the success of the institution.

Mrs. Susanna Glauzen died at the home of her son-in-law, John Murry, three miles northwest of Stout, following a brief illness. She was 68 years of age and came to this country from Switzerland in 1887. She made her home in Monroe the past summer with her daughter, Mrs. Ed. Neuen-schwander. The funeral will be held tomorrow from the German Reformed church in Monticello and the remains will be taken to New Glarus for interment.

Personal.

Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Bragg expect to leave on Feb. 7 for a trip through Florida. Their first stop will be made at Miami, and Jacksonville and St. Augustine will also be visited. The return trip will be made along the eastern coast of Florida.

Mrs. N. S. Brumley of New York, and Mrs. R. P. Campbell of Watertown, N. D., are here on a visit to Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Ruffer.

Mrs. Emma Hensley, who recently underwent an operation in the Lock-hospital, will be able to leave Saturday.

APPROPRIATIONS IN EXCESS OF REVENUE

Bills Introduced in Assembly Already Far Greater Than Estimated Receipts for Next Two Years.

(Special to the Gazette.)

Madison, Wis., Jan. 28.—Notice to the legislature that the estimated revenues of the state for the next two years will permit of new appropriations to the amount of $892,332, and no more, was served by Secretary of State James A. Prear in a pamphlet financial statement furnished in accordance with a recent joint resolution.

In the statement Secretary Prear sets forth a detailed tabulation of receipts and disbursements for the last biennial period and also an estimate of the receipts for the next two years and the probable disbursements so far as "continuing" appropriations are concerned.

Against this warning the solons must balance the fact that already bills have been introduced which call for nearly $2,000,000 of new appropriations, and the "open season" for appropriation bills is not yet over.

Only one method of increasing the revenues of the state has so far been proposed. That is Chief Forester Griffith's recommendation that a two-tenths of a mill tax be levied to provide $600,000 for the establishment of a fire-patrol system. Other methods are likely to be proposed, but it is anticipated that the legislature as a body will balk at any material increase in the state's tax burden.

Among the new appropriations already proposed are $300,000 a year ($600,000 for the biennial period) for the highway commission and other smaller bills totalling about $1,700,000; $200,000 for the next two years for a revolving fund for the binder twine plant at Waupun and a number of measures for the erection of normal schools in various cities, all carrying appropriations. The university, it is said, will ask for a total of $700,000 appropriations, to be secured by a three-eighths of a mill tax.

You Can't Burn the Candle at Both Ends and Last

RAYMOND PUDDICOMBE

First You Weaken Physically and Then Mentally. Hundreds of men and women are sick to day and don't know it. Hundreds are sick and know it only too well,—But they don't know what their sickness is or how to get well.

J. N. PUDDICOMBE

Man and woman Your Sickness Is Sapping Your Vitality Faster Than Your body Can Restore It.

You are burning the candle at both ends—you are sinking, you are losing every day of Your life. And you need help.

We Know a Way to Make You Well

Hundreds who have come to us have gained health, happiness—yes, and wealth, too. The money you invest in bodily health is the best investment you ever made—BUT, you must go to the Chiropractors to be assured of results. CHIROPRACTIC (Ki-ro-prak-tic) science is not medicine, not faith healing, not Christian science, osteopathy, or surgery, and kindred practices. It is a SCIENCE THAT REMOVES THE CAUSE OF YOUR SICKNESS. No matter what your troubles are, you will NOT get the best results from a treatment that deals only with the symptoms. You must have the cause of your sickness removed before you will regain perfect health, and that is what the Chiropractic Science does. All the little aches and pains of like are nature's warnings that something is wrong. In justice to yourself, come to us at once—come for an examination and advice.

Free Consultation

WE MAKE NO CHARGE FOR CONSULTATION. We tell you frankly if you can get well. We have made hundreds well and happy. Men and women who have doubted, who have gone to doctors, physicians, etc., and when they failed, come to us. Seventy-five per cent of the people who come to us have tried the medical profession without success. Yet 98% of all who go to the Chiropractors get well. Can you afford to put it off if you are sick? Can you afford to burn the candle at both ends?

Upon this a mitter of astonishment arose, and the waiter girls, giggling, marvelling and envious, pawed, their platters in hand, to exchange comment on the newcomer's hat and gown. A cowboy at the waiting sink in the corner suspended his face, polishing and gaped over his shoulder in silent ecstasy. Some of the men came forward to greet her, and though she had some difficulty in recognizing one or two of them (so hardly had the years of her absence used them), she eventually succeeded in placing them all.

At length her mother led her through the archway which connected the two shanties, thence along a narrow hall into a small bedroom, into which the western sunset fell. It was a shabby place, but as a refuge from the crowd in the restaurant it was grateful.

Leo looked at her daughter critically. "I don't know what I'm going to do with a girl like you. Why, you're purty-purty as a picture. You were skinnier as a child. I'm fair dazed. Great snakes, how you have opened out! You're the living image of your dad. What started you back? I told you to stay where you was."

"I had no place to go after Aunt Cella died. I had to come home."

"You wrote they was willing to keep you."

"They were, but I couldn't ask it of them. I had no right to burden them, and, besides, Mrs. Hall wrote me that you were sick."

"I am, but I didn't want you to come back. Lay off your things and come out to supper. We'll talk afterward."

The entire house, the rooms and hallways were all of that desolate shabbiness which comes from shabbiness joined with poverty. Everything on which the girl's eyes fell contrasted strongly with her aunt's home on the Brandywine—not because that house was large or luxurious, but because it was exquisitely in order and sweet with flowers and dainty arrangement of color.

She regretted bitterly that she had ever left her eastern friends. Her mother, in truth, showed little pleasure at her coming and almost nothing of the illness of which a neighbor had written. It was, indeed, this letter which had decided her to return to the west. She had come, led by a sense of duty, not by affection, for she had never loved her mother as a daughter should—they were in some way antipathetic—and now she found herself an unwelcome guest.

With aching head and shaking knees Virginia re-entered the dining room, which was now nearly empty of its "guests," but was still misty with the steam of food and swarming with flies. These pests buzzed like bees around the soiled plates on the tablecloths, and one of her mother's first remarks was a frosty apology regarding her trials with those insects. "Seems like you can't keep 'em out," she said.

With desperate effort Leo conquered her disgust. "Never mind; I'm tired and a little upset. I don't need any dinner." Hastily slipping a cup of coffee, she tried hard to keep back the tears, but failed, and no sooner did her mother turn away than she fled to her "Mother, don't you know me?" room, there to sob unheeded her despair and shame. "Oh, I can't stand it!" she called. "I can't, I can't!"

She felt herself alone and solitary in the land of her birth.

Like came in half an hour later, pathetic in her attempt at "sneaking up." She was still handsome in a large featured way, but her gray hair was there, and her face laid with a network of fretful lines. Her color was bad. At the moment her cheeks were yellow and sunken.

She complained of being short of breath and lame and tired. "I'm always tired," she explained. "Pears like sometimes I can't scarcely drag myself around, but I do."

A pang of comprehending pain shot through Virginia's heart. If she could not love her could at least pity and help, and, reaching forth her hand, she patted her mother on the knee. "Poor old mammy!" she said. "I'm going to help you."

but a meekly little town girl to meet—and I'm gone to meet with it. I know it. But what is a father to do? I'm stuck here, and I've got to make a living or quit. I can't quit, so I stagger along."

"I've come back to help you, mother. You must let me relieve you of some of the burden."

"What can you do, child?" Leo asked gently.

"I can teach."

"Not in this town you can't."

"Why not?"

"Well, there's a terrible prejudice against—well, against me. And, besides, the places are all filled for next year. The Wetherfords ain't among the first circles any more."

Leo Virginia remembered Gregg's charge against her mother. "What do you mean by the prejudice against you?" she asked.

"Since I took to running this restaurant my old friends kind of fell off, but never mind that tonight."

The girl's thought was now turned into other half forgotten channels. "I wish you would tell me more about father. I don't remember where he was buried."

"Neither do I, child. I mean I don't know exactly. You see, after that terrible war he went away to Texas. He never came back and never wrote, and by and by word came that he had died and was buried, but I never could go down to see where his grave was at."

"Didn't you know the name of the town?"

"Yes, but it was a new place away down in the Panhandle and nobody I know lived there. And I never knew anything more. Well, I must go back into the restaurant. I hadn't got a girl I can trust to count the cash."

Left alone, Leo Virginia wept no more, but her face settled into an expression of stern sadness. It seemed as if her girlhood had died out of her and that she was about to begin the same struggle with work and worry which had marked the lives of all the women she had known in her childhood.

CHAPTER II.
THE FOREST RANGER.

LEO VIRGINIA was awakened next morning by the passing of some one down the hall calling at each door, "Six o'clock!" She had not slept at all last night. She was lame, heart weary and dismayed, but she rose and dressed herself as neatly as before. She had decided to return to Sulphur. "I cannot endure this," she had repeated to herself a hundred times. "I will not!"

Hearing the clatter of dishes, she ventured with desperate courage into the dining room, which was again filled with cowboys, coal miners, ranchers and their tattered families and certain nondescript town loafers of tramp-like appearance.

Slipping into a seat at the end of the table which offered the cleanest cloth, Leo Virginia glanced round upon her neighbors with shrinking eyes. All were shoveling their food with knife blades and guzzling their coffee with bent heads. Their faces scared her, and she dropped her eyes.

At her left, however, sat two men whose greetings were frank and manly and whose table manners betrayed a higher form of life. One of them was a tall man with a lean red face, against which his blond mustache lay like a chalk mark. He wore a corduroy jacket cut in Norfolk style, and in the collar of his yellow shirt a green tie was loosely knotted. His hands were long and freckled, but were manly and trained to polite usages.

The other man was younger and browner and of a compact, athletic figure. On the breast of his olive green coat hung a silver badge which bore a pine tree in the center. His shirt was tan colored and rough, but his head was handsome. He looked like a young officer in the dress uniform of the regular army. His hands were strong, but rather small, and the lines of his shoulders graceful. Most attractive of all were his eyes, so brown, so quietly humorous and so keen.

In the rumble of cheap and vulgar talk the voices of these men appealed to the troubled girl with great charm. She felt more akin to them than to any one else in the room, and from time to time she raised her eyes to their faces.

They were aware of her also, and their gaze was frankly admiring as well as wondering, and in passing the ham and eggs or the sugar they contrived to show her that they considered her a lady in a rough place and that they would like to know more about her.

She accepted their civilities with gratitude and listened to their talk with growing interest. It seemed that the young man had come down from the hills to meet his friend and take him back to his cabin.

"I can't do it today, Ross," said the older man. "I wish I could, but one meal of this kind is all I can stand these days."

Mrs. Wetherford, seizing the moment, came down to do the honors. "You fellows ought to know my girl, Virginia," this is Forest Supervisor Redfield, and this is Ross Cavanagh, his forest ranger in this district. You ought to know each other. My girl's just back from school, and she don't think much of the fork. It's a little too coarse for her."

Leo flushed under this introduction, and her distress was so evident that both men came to her rescue.

The older man bowed and said, "I didn't know you had a daughter, Mrs. Wetherford." And Cavanagh, with a glance of admiration, added, "We've been wondering who you might be."

Leo went on: "I thought I'd got rid of her. She's been away now for about ten years. I don't know but it was a mistake. Look a like she's grown a little too fine haired for us doughies out here."

"So much the worse for us," replied Redfield.

This little dialogue gave the girl time to recover herself, but Cavanagh watched the blush fade from her face, leaving it cold and white, he sympathized with her—pitying her from the bottom of his heart. He perceived that he was a chance spectator of the first scene in a painful domestic drama—one that might easily become a tragedy. He wondered what the forces might be which had brought such a daughter to this sloven, this virago. To see a maid of this delicate bloom thrust into such a place as Leo Wetherford's "hotel" had the reputation of being roused indignation.

"When did you reach town?" he asked, and into his voice his admiration crept.

"Only last night."

"You find great changes here?"

"Not so great as in my mother. It's all—"

She stopped abruptly, and he understood.

Leo being drawn back to her cash register, Redfield turned to say: "My dear young lady, I don't suppose you remember me, but I knew you when you were a tot of five or six. I knew your father very well."

"Did you?" Her face lighted up.

"Yes, poor fellow; he went away from here rather under a cloud, you know."

"I remember a little of it. I was here when the shooting took place."

"So you were. Well, since then much has happened to us all," he explained to the ranger. "There wasn't room for a dancing young blood such as Ed Wetherford was in those days."

He turned to Leo. "He was no worse than the men on the other side—it was dog eat dog—but some way the people rather settled on him as a scapegoat. He was forced out, and your mother has borne the brunt of it since. Those were lawless days."

More and more Leo Virginia's heart went out in trust toward these two men. Opposed to the malodorous, unwholesome throng which filled the room, they seemed wondrously softened and sympathetic, and in the ranger's gaze was something else—something which made her troubles somehow less intolerable. She felt that he understood the difficult situation in which she found herself.

Redfield went on. "You find us horribly uncivilized after ten years' absence?"

"I find this uncivilized," she replied with fierce intensity, looking around the room. Then, on the impulse, she added: "I can't stand it! I came here to live with my mother, but this is too—too horrible!"

"I understand your repulsion," replied Redfield. "A thousand times I repeat, apropos of this country, 'Where every prospect pleases and only man is vile.'"

"Do you suppose it was as bad ten years ago?" she asked. "Was everything as dirty—as mean? Were the houses then as full of flies and smells?"

"I'm afraid they were. Of course the country isn't all like this, and there are neat homes and gentle people in Sulphur, but most gentlemen are—as they've always been—a shiftless, happy-go-lucky lot at best, and some of them have been worse, as you know."

"I never dreamed of finding my mother in such a place," she went on. "I don't know what to do or say. She isn't well. I ought to stay and help her, and yet—oh, it is disheartening!"

Leo tapped Redfield on the shoulder. "Come over here, Reddy. If you have finished your breakfast, I want to talk with you."

Redfield rose and followed his landlady behind the counter and there sat in earnest conversation while she made change. The tone in which her mother addressed the supervisor, her action of touching him as one man lays hand upon another, was profoundly revealing to Leo Virginia. She revolted from it without realizing exactly what it meant, and, feeling deeply but vaguely the forest ranger's sympathy, she asked:

"How can you endure this kind of life?"

"I can't, and I don't," he answered cautiously, for they were being closely observed. "I am seldom in town. My domain is more than a mile above this level. My cabin is 8,000 feet above the sea. It is clean and quiet up there."

"Are all the other restaurants in the village like this?"

"Worse. I come here because it is the best."

(To be Continued.)

TESTED AND PROVEN

There is a Heap of Solace in Being Able to Depend Upon a Well-Earned Reputation.

For months Janesville readers have seen the constant expression of praise for Doan's Kidney Pills, and read about the good work they have done in this locality. Not another remedy ever produced such convincing proof of merit.

Mrs. E. J. O'Brien, 1020 W. Main St., Janesville, Wis., says: "It is with pleasure that I recommend Doan's kidney complaint, but since using Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at the People's Drug Co., I have enjoyed much better health. I hope that my statement will lead other kidney sufferers to try Doan's Kidney Pills." (Statement given in August, 1908.)

Re-endorsement.

When Mrs. O'Brien was interviewed on September 23, 1910, she added to the above: "I am still glad to say a word in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills. Occasionally during the past two years when I have needed a kidney medicine, I have taken this remedy and the results have always been satisfactory."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

THEATRE

AT THE MYERS GRAND.
The Frank E. Long Stock Co., which individualized, the Misses Anna Sullivan, has been Mr. Long's popular and talented leading lady for a number of seasons past. She is supported by a company of carefully selected and long experienced actors and actresses. They will open a five nights engagement at the Myers Grand Opera House, commencing Monday, January 30th, presenting all royalty plays and polio vaudeville features between the acts.

SCENE IN ACT III, "THE THIRD DEGREE," AT MYERS THEATRE, TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 7.

Frank E. Long Co., has nothing old to offer but the new. The entertainment will no doubt prove as satisfactory here as they have elsewhere. After a week's engagement in Dubuque.

The Dubuque Thien Journal says, "The Long Co., has made Dubuque for years and its coming is pleasurable anticipated because of the well selected productions presented and the excellence of the talent. The players being selected in view of their adaptability and the theatre goes to know that a Frank E. Long production will be satisfactory." This was evidenced in the attendance Monday night, the company which filled the theatre, Miss Sullivan's talent was much commented upon.

"Father and the Boys."
Next Saturday, February 4, matinee and evening, at the Myers Theatre will offer us for the first time here, Wm. H. Turner in George Ade's four act joyous comedy "Father and the Boys." Mr. Ade is conceded to be one of the truly bright and original mirth provoking playwrights of the decade and this play bears every evidence of his best efforts. Wm. H. Turner can trace much of his popularity as a star to his finished performance of "David Harum" during the four years he used that play on tour, but those who have seen him as "Father" in "Father and the Boys" all voice the sentiment that he is even better as the old wool merchant than he was as the shrewd "boss" trader. The part suits Mr. Turner and he fairly revels in its abundant opportunities, and having drawn about him a meritorious company among the number Miss Edith Yenger a bright and vivacious young leading woman.

we have every reason to expect an excellent interpretation of a good play. Aside from the cast all of the scenery and stage equipment is used during the run of the play in New York will be brought to us intact.

Third Degree.
Manager Myers announces the coming engagement of the "Third Degree" on February 7th. This is one of the strongest dramas that has appeared on the American stage in many years and the company that will appear in it here is one of the best on the road. The play is one of the best of Charles Klein, one of the rising playwrights of the country and deals with police work in an attempt to secure a confession from a young man through what is known in police circles as the "Third Degree."

NO BETTER WAY TO BREAK A BAD COLD.
Surely cures the most severe cold and ends grip misery in just a few hours.

The most effective and harmless way to cure the Grippe or break a severe cold, either in the head, chest, back, stomach or limbs, is a dose of Pape's Cold Compound every two hours until three consecutive doses are taken.

You will distinctly feel the cold breaking and all grippe symptoms going after the very first dose. It promptly relieves the most miserable neuralgia pain, headache, dullness, head and nose stuffed up, feverishness, sneezing, sore throat, running of the nose, soreness, stiffness and rheumatic itching.

Take this harmless Compound as directed, with the knowledge that there is no other medicine made anywhere else in the world, which will cure your cold or end Grippe misery as promptly and without any other assistance or bad after-effects as a 25 cent package of Pape's Cold Compound, which any druggist in the world can supply.

After three years' research we have conclusively demonstrated that quinine is not effective in the treatment of colds.

A Master Medical Course.

One day in every month the people in our midst, seeking the best medical advice and service, have learned to look forward to as affording them a chance to consult one of the most able representatives of true specialization, Dr. J. M. Turbin of Chicago.

He has for years enjoyed the honors attaching to the most prominent position in the medical profession and the results of his good work in this city and state forcibly contribute to strengthen and fortify his already great reputation.

Dr. Turbin is a scholarly physician and in his chosen specialty he is past master in the knowledge and use of the latest and best scientific methods of cure.

The circle of his mastery embraces all chronic diseases of men and women and the debilitating diseases and conditions and burden the lives of young men.

The result of his skill in curing diseases that are often associated with malnutrition—the human flesh is better to that he leaves no complicating affection to delay or prevent recovery in all particulars or to cause return of the main disease.

He is a master medical counsel and may be interviewed free of charge. To very many, the doctor needs no introduction.

Dr. Turbin will be in Janesville at the New Myers Hotel, Monday, Jan. 30th.
